

Catalog No. 6017Name Unusual Narmer(?) serekh from TarkhanDate (Period) Dyn. 1Date (King) Narmer(?)Dated By Royal nameType Vessel (cylindrical jar)Method of Inscription InkedMaterial PotteryRegion Memphite regionSite TarkhanLocality Tomb 84Depository Petrie Museum ( University College London )Registration No. UC17291Dimensions 21 cm H (object)References:

Lisa Mawdsley, personal communication, 2015,
Petrie Museum ( University College London ), UC17291

Comments

This unpublished inscription was brought to my attention by Lisa Mawdsley (personal communication, 2015), who plans to publish it as "A new serekh of Narmer from the Naqada III period cemetery of Tarkhan".

Excavated by Petrie.

According to the Object Card at the Petrie Museum, this jar is from Tarkhan Tomb 84, and there are "Faint traces of ink inscription, appear to read ?name of King Ka".

The Petrie Museum online catalog has the wrong photograph but the correct metadata for this object (as of October 5, 2021).

Petrie Museum ( University College London )

UC17291